Interviews:

Mindset Publications, LLC publishes interviews with innovative and provocative thinkers. We like interviews that stretch us intellectually yet remain accessible. We're always on the lookout for voices not traditionally heard in the mass media.

We publish only question-and-answer-style interviews. If your interview is accepted, we retain the option to reprint all or part of the work on our website, in our promotional materials, or other print material.

Before you conduct an interview, send us a query telling us about the interviewee and what topics you plan to cover. If you've already done the interview, no query is necessary. We're particularly interested in interviews with those in unusual careers, travel related stories, artists, film-makers, creative entrepreneurs, generational topics, role models of respectable behavior, security for women, and threat assessment. If you change the names of the people involved, please say so.

If it's not possible to meet face to face, we will conduct a telephone, or online interview. Follow-up questions, which we sometimes request after the interview is complete, can be done by phone or e-mail. The finished product should be accessible to an uninformed audience. To assist in this, we may ask you to send us a list of prepared questions beforehand.

After you've conducted the interview, you should send us an edited transcript of the entire conversation. If we publish the interview, we may cut it to the length that we need and send both you and the interviewee the edited clips for your approval prior to publication.

If the interview is accepted, we will ask you for an introduction of approximately fifty words. The best introductions are creative and engaging and include a description of the interviewee and the setting in which the interview took place. Do not quote from the interview. You may want to ask some biographical questions to obtain material for the introduction. We will also need a photograph of the interviewee — in color, in digital format, high resolution and complete contact information for yourself as well as the interviewee, including e-mail addresses.

Submissions and queries should be typed, and if sent via post, accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope for our reply.
